MAY 2024

Our mission:

Is centered around nurturing the holistic development of youth, emphasizing three pillars:

Social-Emotional Intelligence | Parent Engagement | Academic Support.

Social-emotional intelligence is paramount as it equips young individuals with the necessary skills to navigate relationships, manage emotions, and make responsible decisions, crucial for their personal and professional growth. Parent engagement is pivotal in reinforcing positive behaviors, fostering communication, and creating a supportive environment that empowers youth to thrive. Additionally, academic support provides the scaffolding necessary for students to excel academically, unlocking their potential and preparing them for future success in a competitive world.

Note from Mr.B:

"I am really happy with how things are going with your program in the classroom. Many students who usually do not participate in class are branching out and accepting the new challenges you are throwing at them. Behaviorally, my students are improving in their manners, communication, and listening to instructions. They look forward to working with you guys!"

RESOURCE OF THE MONTH: STRATEGIES FOR WORKING PARENTS

Setting realistic expectations

Parenting is not a role that allows for time off, so balancing parenting with a career presents unique challenges. In this course, Dr. Andrea Bonior explores ways to take care of your mental and physical health and strategies for communication and time management that center around the challenges of being a working parent. Andrea discusses embracing your identity as a working parent by identifying your values, labeling your strengths and challenges, and setting realistic expectations. She teaches ways to build appropriate boundaries by creating work and home buffers, improving communication, and embracing flexibility and structure. Plus, Andrea covers practical strategies to manage your time and energy and nourish your emotional wellness.
